Let's talk about sex

"People get routinely screened for both at the same time. It's found in body fluids — like (pre)cum, vaginal or anal fluids. The test is a urine sample or swab."

"If it's not treated, Gonorrhea can lead to infertility, pelvic disease, a higher chance of getting HIV, and other long-term problems. If you're pregnant, it can also pass onto the baby during delivery. Luckily, antibiotics get rid of it."

"For the treatment to work and not reinfect each other, you and your partners would need to get antibiotics at the same time."

"It's important to try to avoid all sexual activity for another 7 days after everyone starts the treatment. After that, it's a good idea to test regularly and practice safer sex."
